THE GIRARD GADETS AT GIRARDVILLE

WELCOMED BY THE CITIZENS OF THAT PLACE.

A SPLENDID DRILL WITNESSED

The Cadets Enjoyed a Ride on the Electric Railway and Visited the Hammond Colliery.

N YTHING of a mill tary character throws Girardville into as ecstacy of delight and that was the condition in which the cadets of Girard College, Philadelphis, found the people when they vitited the town on Saturday. The cadets lett Philadelphia by special train at 7 a. m. Saturday and were d. a at Girardville at 10.04 a. m., but delays along the line made their arrival forty minut m late.

Company F, 8 h Regiment, N. G. P. awaited the arrival of the visitors at the P. & R. depot. Capt. E. C. Wagner was in command. The cadels were at once escorted to the grounds surrounding the Girard estate office, where a tent had been erected and seats provided for the visiting officials and special guests.

The buildings of the town were profusely decorated and presented a gala appearance The cadets marched like veterans and the people cheered them as they passed through the streets, headed by their own band and drum corps and Company F. The cadets numbered 16 officers and 226 men, includng band and drum corps, a total of 24%.

At the entrance to the Girard office grounds Company F opened ranks and saluted the cadets as they passed in. The cadets were formed in line before the large open tent and General Louis Wagner took the platform under the tent and made a formal announcement of the day's programme. Col. P. H. Monaghan, superintendent of the public schools of Girardville, then made the address of welcome. He said that the cadets should not consider themselves as among strangers when in Girardville, but among friends, warm riends who have an interest in Girard College, its work and students. There are fifteen boys from Girardville in the college and two from the anthracite region, and as companions and fellow-students of those boys the people of Girardville extended the cadets a hearty welcome.

Prof. A. H. Fetterolf, LL. D., president of Girard College, made a response. It was a graceful acknowledgement of the

The command to stack arms was then given and, this done, the cadets marched from the grounds to the Armory on the opposite side of the street.

The Armory was magnificently decorated with flags, bunting and banners. Three tables were stretched the length of the hall for the cadets and company, and a table for the officers, newspaper representatives and special guests extended the width of the hall at the east end. The HERALD, Pottsville Republican and Chronicle, and Philadelphia Times and Press had reprosentatives on hand.

General Wagner introduced Rev. Humphries, of the Girardville P. M. church, who offered grace. The cadets then took seats and partook of the excellent feast that had been prepared for them in a manner that showed their appetites had been sharpened by their early morning rise and the journey from Philadelphia. The dinner was an elaborate one. There were no menus, but each person at the table found a handsome Japanese napkin under his plate, bearing an excellent view of Girard College. The fare served had been sent from the college and was at the expense of the institution. The citizens of Effectually yet gently, when costive or formed the task very well. Before leaving the hall the cadets, upon a signal from Frank O. Zesinger, assistant plauded it heartily.

At 1:80 p. m. the cadets boarded four cars that had been placed at their disposal by the electric railway company and enoved a ride to the Hammond collfery, They walked a short distance into the drift to get an idea of what the inside of a coal mine looks like. The cadets, who ranged from twelve to eventeen years of age, drilled like vetrans under command of Colonel Ward. They seemed to be as perfect as such an rgan zation can be, but the college officials absequently stated that they were not at heir best. The silent drill, and the drill by word of command, by taps of drums end by music of the band were heartily an lauded. After the drill and review the cadets narched back to the Girard office grounds nd again stacked their guns. They then arched to the Armory and had supper, at he conclusion of which they gave three pearty cheers and a tiper for the citizens of Girardville, three more for the ladies who ooked after their interests in the Armury, and three for Company F. The college yell followed and was received as it was earlier in the day.

The cadets were organized at Girard College on August 31, 1870. The roster is as follows:

Rankin. Drummers, 10. At 6 p. m. the cadets left Girardville on a special P. & R. train for home. Cheers and the college yell were repeatedly given at the depot by the cadets, many of whom looked as if they wished to stay longer in Girardville, and the citizens of the place seemed equally sorry that the visit could not be prolonged. Among the college people who accom panied the students on the trip were the president, Prof. A. H. Fetterolf, H. D. Gregory, LL. D., vice president; Miss Anna M. SUNDAY SERMON.

Rev. Powick's Interesting Sermon on "The Companions of Fools," Abbreviated summer services are held furing the hot weather at the Methodist Episcopal church. The subject on Sunday evening was from Proverbs XIII-20 The companions of fools shall be destroyed." That we are known by the ompany we keep is a truth that has beome proverbial. Many proverbial truths are partial falsehoods but this is pure gold. True, we may sometimes be unavoidably thrown into the society of the wicked. But such is not the sort of companionship to which the text refers nor the sort that exerts the greatest influence upon chracter. He only can properly be called a companion whose society or whose qualities are preferred. And if we prefer the society or the principles of fools we shall share the fate of the fool-and justly so. The companion of fools is by that very fact a fool himself already. There is something wrong with the heart when we prefer the society of loose and flippant specimens of exercises were of a easy virtue before that of staunch and very interesting and stable examples of earnest plety. Nothing can be more certain than that we become like our associates-we assimilate their corated with national flags, evergreens likeness-especially it they are bad-for evil is more contagious than good because the heart is more susceptible. But a companion is not necessarily an associate. Many are companions of fools who would scorn their society. He is a companion of fools, in the sense of the text, who is in sympathy with them-who aids, encourages, or shares in any way with them in their folly. It is to be feared that some who would do nothing dishonest to secure their election to offl.e wink at corrupt methods by which they are served at second hand-men who would not utter an unchaste word will join in the laugh when others utter them-some who will not drink in public will do so in privateand others who would not go to the theatre, and worse places, at home, will visit them abroad. But they are none the less companions of fools for despising their society while sympathizing with their practices. They may disdain to recognize them in social life but they are companions in real life and moral principle and may expect to share the same fate. They shall be destroyed together. Then beware of your companionships. Avoid the society and the principles of fools. On the other hand seek the companionship of the pure and good. Above all that of the Friend that sticketh closer than a brother. Like Abraham we may become friends of God and live so near to Christ that he will not be ashamed to call us brethren. Thus walking with God "we shall, as in a glass beholding the glory of the Lord, bechanged into the same image from glory to glory even as by the spirit of the Lord,"
